TLC—The Treatment and Learning Centers Welcomes New Board Member

Rockville, Md.— TLC—The Treatment and Learning Centers, a local, private, non-profit agency that provides educational, therapeutic, and vocational services to children and adults with disabilities welcomes new Board member Joe Parlanti. Richard Pavlin, Executive Director of TLC states, “Joe has already demonstrated his capacity for board work through his volunteer work on the Technology Team this past year where he played such a key role.”

Parlanti, IT Director for Gene Logic, Inc., brings a wealth of information technology expertise and community involvement to the Board. He is an active member of the Tech Council of Maryland CIO Roundtable and was nominated for the 2006 Tech Council of Maryland Mid-Atlantic IT Executive of the Year Award. Parlanti is also involved in many groups including the Vintage Sports Car Club of America, Academy of Model Aeronautics, NASA Radio Control Club (President) and the Society of Automotive Engineers.

Parlanti is a graduate of The University of Kentucky with a Bachelor of Science in Mechanical Engineering and resides in Gaithersburg, MD, with his wife and two sons. In addition to being actively involved in his son’s boy scout troop, he enjoys golf, mountain biking, home remodeling, wine making and cooking.
